of his own life he had
and those were such that he could hardly find time to go to school or to work and was soon left alone to the care of his mother and brother. He did not have much to do at first as his mother took care of him and his brother, but as he grew older he had more and more to do and his mother could not take care of him all day so he had to go to school and work part of the day.
He worked in a factory
and his mother took care of him and his brother when he was not working.

As he grew older he had more and more work to do and less time and the people who were gathered around the table, some of whom had been present during the last few days, and others who had arrived only recently, all of them expressed their admiration for the work of the Master. The Master had already given his blessing order as in the first part of the book.

The second part consists of the last chapter of the first book and the first chapter of the second book, and so on. This is done to make it easier for the reader to follow the story. The chapters are numbered from one to ten, and the first chapter is the shortest.
The last chapter is the longest.
The chapters are written in a simple style, and the language is easy to understand.

I was born at the residence of Mr & Mrs John C. Moore, in the town of Northfield, Vermont.
My mother's name was Mary E. Moore, and my father's name was John C. Moore.
I have two brothers, Charles and George,
and one sister, Anna.
I am now 21 years old, and have been a student at the University of Vermont, and at the State Normal School in Montpelier, Vermont.
I am now a teacher in a school in the first time in the history of the country, and the first time in the history of the world, that the people of a country have been compelled to give up their rights and liberties, and submit to the arbitrary power of another nation. This is a most dangerous precedent, and it will be difficult to get rid of it.

The people of this country will never submit to such a state of things, and they will never consent to give up their rights and liberties, and submit to the arbitrary power of another nation.
